

National Severe Weather Warning Service

Chief Forecasters Assessment

A deep depression currently developing over the eastern Atlantic will move slowly northeastwards across the UK on Friday and Saturday, bringing another dose of very unsettled weather to many regions. The associated frontal zone will spread northwards across the southern half of the UK later on Thursday, bringing with it persistent rain. This rain then stalls over parts of the northern half of the UK on Friday and Saturday, leaving showery conditions in its wake over the southern half of the UK, some of these showers heavy and persistent. Meanwhile, very windy conditions, with gales and gusts up to 60 MPH in exposed areas, are expected to accompany this unsettled weather over southwestern UK during Friday. Showers and rain are expected to widely produce 15-30mm of rain across a large part England and Wales between late Thursday and late Saturday. Locally parts of southern and western Wales and the high ground in southwest England can expect 60-80mm of rain during this 48 hour period.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Rain

Valid from 00:05 on Fri, 15th Jun 2012 until 23:59 on Sat, 16th Jun 2012

A spell of wet and windy weather with periods of persistent heavy rain will affect parts of Wales and Southwestern England from late Thursday through Friday and Saturday. The public should be aware of the risk of localised flooding.
